Overview & Objectives

Formalising Informal Learning: Bridging Competencies and Credentials

From Recognised Prior
Learning to Future-
Proof Qualifications

The Oxbridge Forum 2025

The Oxbridge Forum explores how prior and experiential learning can be formally recognized to build inclusive, future-ready qualification systems.

This forum brings together leading scholars and practitioners to explore the evolving landscape of alternative credentialing, including Accreditation of Prior Experiential Learning (APEL) and Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL).

Join us as we shape the future of inclusive, flexible, and competency-based education systems—where every skill counts, and every learner matters.

Through a series of keynote presentations, panel discussions, and interactive sessions, attendees will gain insights into the critical challenges and opportunities in recognising prior and experiential learning for the future of professional development and workforce readiness.

Exploring opportunities to transform experiential learning and informal skills into recognised credentials.

To promote cross-sector collaboration between academia, industry, and policy stakeholders in designing inclusive credentialing ecosystems that validate real-world experience and non-traditional learning.

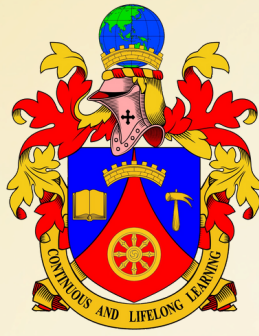

To identify pathways to access alternative credentials that support career mobility, business creation, and participation in the digital economy.

To showcase innovative models and technologies for scalable, competency-based recognition aligned with workforce and entrepreneurial needs.

Oxbridge Professional Awards

Each scholar will have navigated through a rigorous learning and assessment journey, mastering industry-relevant competencies and embodying the values of integrity, innovation, and leadership.

Your success is a testament not only to the personal dedication but also to the collective support of mentors, trainers, peers, and the learning community.

As scholars step forward with their newly earned credentials, we are confident scholars will continue to uphold the highest standards of professionalism and inspire others along the way.

We extend our warmest congratulations to all award
